Bob Burman

By LYLE ABBOTT
Bob Burman, Earl Cooper and at least three others form the entry list in the Sheephead Bay track race will be in Phoenix for the 150 mile on the state fair oval. This was announced in a letter received by Motor Commissioner George Purdy Bullard from Fred J. Wagner, official starter of all automobile races sanctioned by the American Automobile Association. And the letter contained the far more satisfying news that Fred himself, owner of the most famous pair of speckled pants, and the glossiest of tan puttees would be here to tap the drivers on the shoulder, and to wag the checkered flag.

Sounds like speed, does it not. To get at least five cars direct from a track where the races are won at 102 miles an hour sounds right smart swift. And count in with the above cheering demons our old friend, J. Oldfield, with his De Lago, Glover Ruckstell and Eddie Pullen with Morris, Lou Gandy with a Duesenbergs.

Williams, Young Airman Will Fly At State Fair

Another sensational free attraction was signed for the coming Arizona state fair yesterday when Secretary Shaugnessy appended his name to a contract with the manager of O. E. Williams, the aviator, who is to give daily exhibitions before the grandstand during the six great days with his Benoit tractor biplane. Williams is a daredevil and does stunts that seem almost impossible. He has been exceptionally successful the country over and has had very few falls.

Williams has broken a few records in his career also. Recently at Petaluma, Calif., he flew 14 1/2 miles in 12 minutes and 32 seconds. Of his work at the Clare county fair in Arkansas the secretary wrote: "Your aviator gave the best of satisfaction. Every flight was successful and more than pleased everyone." Williams claims his machine is one of the fastest in the country and he will come to Phoenix prepared to give the exhibition of his life.

He enjoys the distinction of being among the youngest of aviators and he was the first man to demonstrate the heavier than air machine before the emperor of Japan. Since that time he has flown also in most of the important aviation meets that have been held in this country.

REPRESENTATIVE CROWD AT FARM IMPROVEMENT MEETING

Ladies of Neighborhood of Roosevelt District Are Hostesses at Splendid Banquet—Many Phoenicians Attend.

Proving that the neighborhood, from which "The Neighborhood House" takes its name, extends even unto the crowded city, many Phoenicians, businessmen, bankers, educators, as well as practical farmers, met with members of the Southside Farm Improvement Association at the turkey dinner last night. To the ladies of the neighborhood, who cooked the dinner, and their daughters, who served it, the highest praise is due; as hostesses, they qualified with brilliant success. And a hundred and twenty-five persons from all parts of life were there to enjoy it, and the splendid talks that followed.

It was a farm improvement meeting primarily, and, naturally, the talks centered around that topic. W. E. Walker, president of the association, occupied the chair.

Dr. Rudolph B. Von Klein Smid, president of the State University, made the feature address. He showed that after all, the best product of the farm, or of any community, is the wholesome man and woman. Better ideals of living express themselves in better farms, just as they do in better paintings, or better music, and they react upon those who cherish and expand them, making for happiness and prosperity. The development of ideals among farm people, as one of the duties of the farm improvement association, and it proceeds in many diverse ways to perform its work. It may show a man how to raise more and better alfalfa, but its real purpose is to cause him to improve his condition of life, to think and do better. Could welfare on the farm, he touched on, also, Dr. Von Klein Smid's remarks were pointed with many well told stories, and his speech was received with the deepest appreciation.

Professor Douglas, also, of the university, spoke on co-operation and team play, and to make his meaning clearer, he compared a farm community to a football team, his simile being suggested by the recent wholly satisfying victory of the university team over Pomona college.

H. M. Fennimore, president of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, looked forward, telling of the time when there would be the complete understanding between all the people of the valley, when the city and the countryside would be bound together by a strong tie of common interest.

Taking as his text a quotation which appeared recently on the editorial page of The Republican, Dwight B. Heard spoke on getting together for the common good. He read the text, which follows:

"I believe that my own greatest good is to be won through co-operation with others for those things which we desire. Therefore, whether I work or whether I play, I will enjoy my efforts with theirs, in groups that shall be large or small, transient or permanent, as the needs or custom may require. I shall work faithfully in small things as in great, for the public good, and to those of my fellowmen who contribute to my own welfare I will be faithful until death."

—De Garat.

C. C. Green spoke on the work of the United Produce Growers' Association, in relation to systematizing farm work through the marketing of farm products.

Farm Advisor John A. Armstrong followed, with a summing up of the work of the office he holds, and suggesting more close relationship between the farmer and businessman.

Prominent in the program was the solo work of Mrs. H. E. Edgington, who accompanied on the piano by Miss Bertha Kirkland.

economic questions of a general nature as they arise, and, moreover, promise their mutual support within the scope of their own interests."

Article IV. "In the event that a great power not signatory to this treaty should menace the safety of the states or one of the high contracting parties, and that the menaced party should be forced to make war on that party, the two others bind themselves to observe toward their ally a benevolent neutrality. Each one of them in that case reserves to herself the right to participate in the war, if she should consider it appropriate to make common cause with her ally."

On July 26, 1914, eight days before Austria declared war on Serbia, Count Berchtold, then Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, telegraphed to Kajetan Merry von Kapos-Mere, then Austro-Hungarian ambassador at Rome, that the evidence in relation to the assassination of the Austrian crown prince, Francis Ferdinand, was such as to constitute a serious Serbian agitation, carried on for many years past, are likely to compel us to assume a serious attitude in Belgrade. He said Italy should be informed that, should peaceful means fail, the Vienna cabinet would not think of inaugurating a war of conquest or of acquiring any Serbian territory."

The Austrian ambassador telegraphed to Count von Berchtold on July 29 that the Italian position concerning territorial compensation fully confirmed his impression that Italy "does not even shrink from attempts at blackmail."

Austria informed Italy on August 2 that the "unjustified Russian mobilization against us and Germany" constituted ample justification for applying the terms of the alliance. Italy in reply pointed out the perils and sacrifices to which war might expose her and added: "This enormous difference between the perils and sacrifices on the one hand and the advantage on the other is, in fact, the very reason why Austria-Hungary desired a war which she could easily have avoided, whereas we did all in our power to save Europe from this fearful misfortune."

On August 12 Count von Berchtold telegraphed that Austria had intended to localize the conflict with Serbia, and that Germany had supported her in that effort, adding: "We had, it is true, received the assurance from Germany that she would stand by our side if Russia should intervene. Our action against Serbia, however, was not aimed at provoking Russia."
